Byron C. Pruitt, Director of Management Training & Development for The Employers Association has over 25 years of management experience and is a Professional in Human Resources (PHR). Byron is also called upon to perform consulting services for members, as well as public speaking.

Byron's background includes experience in manufacturing and non-manufacturing environments. He facilitates many types of programs for all levels of participants. His areas of expertise are leadership, management skills, team building, harassment, and mentoring. He has trained thousands of participants since joining The Employers Association in 1985. His first hand management experience brings a real world approach to his presentations.

Byron provides a variety of training and consulting services to companies, organizations, and attorneys to help with harassment issues. These services include training for employees at all levels, training for in-house trainers, training for investigators and training for individuals in one-on-one sessions. He also conducts investigations into allegations of harassment and consults with organizations regarding harassment policies and procedures, preventative training programs, and handling of harassment complaints.

Byron is responsible for the development and implementation of in-house and on-site training programs tailored to fit the needs of member companies. He is committed to providing you with the skills and insights to help develop a more effective leadership team. Byron has seen first hand the benefits for participants who practice enhanced management skills. He is a superb facilitator who combines real life examples and the right touches of humor with enthusiasm for his subjects. He is a dedicated professional who delivers thoroughly researched and proven management concepts to the seminar participant.
